

EF FACET Cautious Discretionary Portfolio Fund

June 2019

Information in this factsheet is at the last valuation point in June 2019 (except where indicated).

Investment Objective

The investment objective of the Fund is to provide a long-term total return above that of the UK consumer price index. The Fund will be actively managed and invest in multiple asset classes with a portfolio of transferable securities which may include investment trusts, collective investment schemes, deposits, money market instruments, derivatives and other alternative investments such as structured products, commodity and property funds. The investment manager has the discretion to weight the portfolio towards any investment type, or geographical region, at any time provided it is compatible with the investment objective, risk parameters and policy of the Fund as a whole.

Portfolio activity and comment

US and UK stocks continued their strong run in June, returning to close to all-time highs. The year-to-date gain for US stocks is now up 18.4% and UK stocks have broadly followed, despite political distractions, and ended the first half up 13%. The driving force came predominantly from the US Federal Reserve and their dovish intention to keep rates on hold and move closer to the bond market view of lower rates. The European Central Bank (ECB) also made clear a commitment to maintain loose monetary policy for the foreseeable future. This change in tack from the two largest central banks, also drove up the price of bonds around the world with riskier bonds in higher-yield and emerging markets doing particularly well. The technical bounce in stocks and bonds was unsurprising but reflected the familiar paradox that bad news on the economy is good news for asset prices as cheaper money looks for some kind of return. For now, the US economy appears to be holding up well with unemployment at record lows and wages on the rise. The picture in the UK is similar. The question is, how much can better can things get? US/China tensions over tariffs have eased a little since the G20 summit. Whilst we will soon know who is the new Prime Minister, there is unlikely to be much clarity on Brexit until the end of summer. The all-important US third quarter earnings season will be closely watched as a true gauge of the health of corporate America. The FACET investment team have moved the fund to a more neutral stance, conscious that the returns, whilst good year-to-date, are more vulnerable to evidence of a slowing of global economic growth. The Cautious fund rose 0.38% in June.
